

2013

Sanah Behera

Content Coordinator

Being a student of sociology, I have opened up to analyzing the varied aspects of our society. One can see a lot of inequality all around, especially in terms of living conditions and availability of opportunities to get educated and earn a livelihood. Gender inequality is the most palpable across all sections of society. The girl child especially, has had to face a lot of hardships in our country. It is ironical how on one hand we worship so many goddesses in our country and on the other hand also witness such an alarming number of cases of crimes against women and violation of their rights. Not a single day goes by without news related to female feticide and infanticide, molestation, rapes, child abuse, child marriages etc. It is high time girls get their share of respect in society and feel wanted. Thus, I feel it is my duty as a girl and as a responsible citizen of this country to contribute towards the empowerment of the girl child. I believe that drops ultimately do make up an ocean and hence every step taken in the direction of securing the future of the girl child is worthwhile. The girl child rights campaign is a very good medium through which I can do my bit for the girl child's well-being. I hope that this campaign will enable people to become more aware about the current situation of underprivileged girls in the country and will bring about at least some positive changes in the society. Smiles on the faces of deprived girls are what will make this campaign most successful.